Propose End Of Mandate May 1

The United Nations project of Palestine partition received further impetus when Russia and the United States amicably settled several differences and came smoothly to agreement on most of the principles and some of the details of a formula to enforce the political division of the Holy Land.

Under the Russian-American agreement, in which both sides made concessions, the British mandate for Palestine would terminate on May 1, 1948, and the proposed Arab and Jewish states would become independent as soon thereafter as possible, but in no case later than July 1, 1948.

As proposed by the four-nation drafting group, consisting of the United States, the Soviet Union, Guatemala and Canada, the new plan calls for termination of the mandate two months earlier than the original United States proposal had suggested, but six months later than the Jan. 1 date proposed by the Soviet Union.

The latest draft was a series of compromises that were largely result of the tireless efforts of Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Under-Secretary for External Affairs.

Rabbi Forced Out

Rabbi Benjamin Schultz, for twelve years rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, a Reform synagogue at Yonkers, N.Y., resigned, charging "pressure" from the synagogues' board of trustees.

A series of articles entitled "Communists Invade The Churches," appeared in "The New York World-Telegram" under Rabbi Schultz's name. Five days later, the board of trustees voted to bring the matter before a meeting of the [illegible] recent pressure took the form of the board's staying away from my services in a body and threatening to stay away all year."

He said he had hoped to say good-bye to his congregation at services but the board had barred him from using the synagogue. "I shall continue to fight Communism

Retailer Was Famed For Original Ideas

Walter H. Rich, president since 1929 of Rich's, Inc., one of the South's largest department stores, died at his home at Atlanta, Georgia, after a heart attack. He was 67 years old.

One of America's leading retail merchants, Mr. Rich announced in 1946 that his store had grossed $33,000,000 the previous year. This year he received, at a dinner in New York, the fourth annual Tobé Award for distinguished service to American retailing.

The popularity the store gained in recent years was in large measure due to Mr. Rich, who liked to call himself as "just a floor-walker." He was especially proficient in expanding the store's long-term policy of liberal credit to customers and other good-will measures.

Born in Atlanta, he attended Columbia University and then joined the staff of the store. Mr. Rich became treasurer in 1904 and vice-president four years later. His company's policy on adjustments of returns of goods once went so far as to permit the acceptance of hundreds of pairs of defective stockings sold by rival stores.

When, because of the depression, the city of Atlanta was temporarily unable to pay its school teachers, Mr. Rich suggested that the payments be made in scrip, which his store would honor. Rich's sold over $600,000 worth of goods for scrip, which eventually was redeemed.

The imaginative Mr. Rich was constantly at work on construction and expansion programs. "What's good for Atlanta is good for Rich's," was long the store policy under him.

Mr. Rich had been a vice-president and a director of the Metropolitan Opera Company. He was a former member of the Atlanta Board of Education.

In 1939 Mr. Rich was chairman of a committee appointed by the Mayor of Atlanta to investigate local public schools. He also had served on the Governor's staff and

Debate On Palestine May Be Long

The principal point of difference between the Russian and American plans was that the Russians want the Security Council in the U.N. to be in complete charge of effecting a Palestine partition, while the Americans at first eliminated the Council entirely from any preassigned role in a prospective political change in the Holy Land.

The speech by Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Deputy Foreign Minister, last week warned the United States that since the U. N. General Assembly can only recommend, but cannot command, any purely Assembly scheme of partition would necessarily depend for success upon complete co-operation by the Jews, Arabs and British, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

At the same time, Mr. Pearson warned the Russians that the Security Council could not properly be brought into the Palestine picture at this stage unless the Security Council took a decision determining that the "present" Palestine situation constitutes an existing threat to peace.

Presumably, such a Security Council decision would be based on the likelihood that the Palestinian Arabs would oppose partition with physical force or the threat of it.

If the Security Council did make such a determination at this time, Mr. Pearson said, it then would be necessary for it to decide on measures to see partition through in Palestine, assuming that the Assembly had recommended partition.

In the case of the two Security Council decisions to which Mr. Pearson referred, the Big Five power of veto could kill either one, and because of this he warned that the Big Five would have to agree [illegible] to be considered it by using partition through.

Hence, in effect, Mr. Pearson was emphasizing before the partition subcommittee that if the Security Council were to be brought in legally at this stage, the Big Five—more specifically the United States, Russia and Britain—would have to agree on the formula in advance.

The importance of the Canadian speech, and of proposals that are likely to grow out of it, is that it might pave the way for the United States to accept a Palestine role for the Security Council provided that enough advance planning can be accomplished to remove the danger of a stultifying veto at some crisis in the career of partition enforcement.

David Horowitz, head of the economic department of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, told the sub-committee that the Agency would accept the proposal for dividing customs revenue between the two states on a 50—50 basis, but proposed a ceiling on payments to the Arab state.

Such a division, which amounts to a subsidy of the Arab state, was recommended in the majority report of the United Nations Special Committee of Inquiry on Palestine on the ground that the partition plan would give the Jewish state the more economically developed part of Palestine.

Mr. Horowitz suggested that the ceiling be based on the economic activity in Palestine over the last two years, which would limit the annual payment to the Arab state to about £4,000,000 ($16,000,000). He suggested that the division of revenues be re-examined after three years' operation in the light of any change in price levels in Palestine.

A long debate is expected over Palestine. The Palestine Committee is now divided into three subcommittees—one composed of supporters of partition, another composed of Arab delegates who strenuously oppose partition, and a third that is intended to settle the differences between the two plans.

The United States on Monday modified its proposal for the partition of Palestine, suggesting that certain functions be performed by the United Nations Security Council in an effort to meet the criticisms of the Soviet Union.

The revised United States plan would give the Security Council jurisdiction in matters relating to international peace and security and would require Great Britain to negotiate with that body the date of independence for the new Jewish and Arab governments. Under the Soviet plan the transfer would be administered by the Security Council, whereas the United

Irgun Sees Partition Long Way Off

In the event of an Arab attack on the Jewish community of Palestine Irgun Zvai Leumi would start an offensive against the Arabs and would be prepared, under certain conditions, to fight alongside Haganah with which it is now feuding. Irgun Zvai Leumi, however, believes that the possibility of an Arab attack is remote.

This was disclosed in answer to a questionnaire submitted to the Irgun by The New York Times correspondent and returned with neatly typewritten answers via The Palestine Post newspaper office.

Irgun Zvai Leumi also said that if an international police force is sent to Palestine, "it would not receive soldiers of neutral or possibly friendly states with fire." And in the event of a Jewish Government being established after partition, Irgun Zvai Leumi would oppose it, but would not use arms against it.

Defining the part to be taken in the event of an Arab attack, Irgun Zvai Leumi said:

"One must distinguish between two possible eventualities: Arab incidents in Eretz Israel while the British continue their occupation and a general attack on us inside the country and from outside its borders after the British have left.

"We must say at once that both of these possibilities seem to us, in spite of everything, to be highly hypothetical. The Arab masses do not want war with us. They have seen us fighting for years against a powerful regime which, in spite of all its cruelties, has failed to subdue us. They make a comparison and draw a logical conclusion.

"Should we, nevertheless, be at-

[illegible] it will be essential to unite the British occupation regime which is punctiliously preparing 'Indian' incidents in Eretz Israel.

"In the second case, one must not think in terms of defense. We should then be faced with the alternative of total destruction or complete victory. Only an offensive can save us from destruction and achieve victory.

In both cases cooperation with Haganah is conceivable on the basis of an appropriate allocation of functions. We believe that such cooperation would be essential, if only (Ben-Gurion) vainglory does not nullify it from outset."

Irgun Zvai Leumi has been taking potshots at David Ben-Gurion, chairman of the Jewish Agency executive, ever since he threatened to destroy the dissidents by force, if necessary.

In answer to a question whether the underground groups would be merged, Irgun Zvai Leumi replied that there had been no negotiations with Haganah since November, 1945. It added:

"And how could there be negotiations when Ben-Gurion, with characteristic arrogance which even his close colleagues condemn, invites us to form a long queue and beg him to be good enough to accept us in his security ranks. Ben-Gurion supplemented this invitation with threats and we find it difficult to decide which is the more stupid, the invitation or the threats."

Asked what steps would be taken to prevent the implementation of the partition plan and whether Irgun Zvai Leumi would oppose any Jewish government that may be established, Irgun Zvai Leumi replied:

"It is premature to go into detail. The partition plan is still a long way from realization. But if, nevertheless, it becomes reality, which we do not believe, we shall never recognize the legality of carving up our country and we shall find appropriate means of fighting for the restoration of its integrity.

"We shall oppose any Jewish Government which accepts carving up of the homeland; that is, accepts the robbery of 35 per cent of its territory. Such a government must, in an objective sense, become an anti-Jewish Government, seeing that it will be compelled after a short time to shut the gates to hundreds of thousands of exiles for whom there will be no room in the partition state. But we shall not use arms against any Jewish Government."

Concerning the relationship between Irgun Zvai Leumi and H. Peter Bergson groups in the United States, Irgun Zvai Leumi said:

B'nai Brith Center To Cost $300,000

A campaign for $300,000 to construct a B'nai Brith Hillel Foundation building near Brooklyn College, to serve all groups on the campus "irrespective of race or creed," was started at a ceremony in the college.

Dr. Harry D. Gideonse, president of Brooklyn College and of Freedom House, exhibited drawings of the proposed two-story colonial-type structure. It will include a chapel, auditorium, lounge, library, study and workrooms and kitchen. The architect is Max Abramovitz of Harrison & Abramovitz, architects for the United Nations.

At the ceremony were Fred J. Zeitz, president of Martin's Department Store and treasurer of the drive; Joseph L. Paradise, president of the B'nai Brith Metropolitan Council; Max Kiss and Samuel Lemberg, co-chairman of the campaign, and Rabbi Herman Pollack, director of the Brooklyn College Hillel Foundation.

The present Hillel Foundation at Brooklyn College was the first in metropolitan New York. It is one of 173 similar units on campuses in the United States. Brooklyn College, at Dr. Gideonse's request, encouraged establishment of a center in 1940. Larger quarters were said to be necessary to accommodate the 14,600 day and evening students at the college.

Mr. Kiss asserted that the Brooklyn Hillel Foundation Building Corporation, in cooperation with all the Brooklyn B'nai Brith lodges, had "an outstanding fund-raising committee" to obtain the $300,000 by Nov. 25. A dinner in the St. George Hotel to end the campaign will [illegible] Dr.

"Hillel is not concerned with serving any of the separate tendencies in the Jewish life of our time," Dr. Gideonse said. "It is open to Zionists as well as non-Zionists, to the Hebrew as well as to the Yiddish tradition and to the Reform as well as to the Conservative and Orthodox groups."

Says Common Aim Bars Jewish-Arab War

Henry A. Wallace, in his first public address since his recent return from Palestine, asserted in New York that the common interest of Jews and Arabs there bar any conflict "unless outside interests stir it up."

The "working journalist" and former Vice-President, who returned after an eighteen-day visit to Palestine and Italy, praised the progress made in The Holy Land and said the entire Middle East would benefit by the development of a Jewish Palestine. He stressed the need of a Jordan Valley Authority to provide cheap industrial power, declaring it required cooperation of both Jews and Arabs as well as a large amount of capital from the United States.

Mr. Wallace addressed 1,000 persons at a dinner sponsored by the Progressive Citizens of America in the Hotel Astor. Other speakers were Ira A. Hirschmann, Michael M. Nisselson, president of the Amalgamated Bank, and Dr. Frank Kingdon, PCA co-chairman.

Declaring that without United Nations action, King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan "might possibly" move into Arab Palestine, Mr. Wallace said, however, that there was no indication of invasion of Jewish Palestine either from the north or east.

He said he called on the King and appealed to him to cooperate in an ambitious program to raise the Arab standard of living. He did not give the King's reply. The Arab leader probably will visit America within a year or two, Mr. Wallace reported, to seek aid in developing the part of [illegible]

RELIGION AT WORK

By Maeanna Chesterton-Mangle

The people of Henderson, N.C., are reaping the harvest of co-operation and friendliness. Sigmund F. Teiser was a poor boy when he first came to North Carolina; but diligence and perseverance, coupled with just dealings on both sides, soon made him prosper. Recently he died and in his will he had stated that he wished to aid the interests of the people of the County who had helped him accumulate his money. So, although Mr. Teiser himself was a Jew, he left instructions for the executors to send $100 to each of the one hundred and twelve churches in the County, regardless of denomination or creed. Of these, 59 were white and 53 Negro.

The Jews of Ujhely, Hungary, were hard hit during the war and their one thought was for the safety of the sacred objects apparently destined to destruction and desecration. The Roman Catholic Bishop of that area, the Right Reverend Franz Payer, came to their succor. He buried the precious Torah scrolls and other irreplaceable religious properties under the floors of a theatre and there they remained unharmed throughout the entire Nazi occupation. After V-E Day they were recovered and once again used in worship and praise of the living and all-loving Father who raised up a servant of God to serve his fellow man in time of need.

One of the valuable antique Torah scrolls was sent to America and was placed in the Ark of the Forest Hills Jewish Center in expression of appreciation to the rehabilitation aid sent by a member of the Center who had been born in Ujhely. In accepting the Torah from the sister congregation in Ujhely, the officers of the Forest Hills Jewish Center wrote a separate note to Bishop Payer saying, "We honor you for your brotherly self-identification with a congregation in Israel during a time of trouble. Tested under fire, your faith proved a true embodiment of the divine command to love our fellow-men. You testified to that love by deeds of courage, at the peril of your own life. The Torah . . . will also remind us of your own work at that time, and stand as a continuing symbol of the many ties that link Jew and Christian, despite all the differences between them."

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

by Don Graham

Can shyness be overcome?

Indeed it can! And every bit of progress one makes in this direction is of great benefit. For an effective personality is an asset in almost every occupation, particularly in smaller communities where commercial and social contacts so often overlap.

According to Dr. Henry C. Link, eminent psychologist, personality is best developed by "learning to do an increasing number of things for and with people".

For example, you may have no interest in playing bridge. But if you do, it will help you to develop poise because you have acquired a new skill and are brought into contact with other people. And this contact is made easier for you because you will be engrossed in doing something with them.

Taking part in other games, sports, club life, town council meetings or activities with other people will help cure your shyness. And this, in turn, will help you achieve greater success in your work.

The life insurance companies in Canada play an important part in the economic life of the nation. Every year over 250 million life insurance dollars are invested in farms and industries, apartment and office buildings, and other projects which promote progress and create jobs.

"I just had to peek . . ."

"Couldn't wait another minute to see what flavor of rennet-custard mommy's makin' for me today. 'Course I like all flavors, but knowin' ahead of time gives me somethin' pleasant to think about till dinner!"

Rennet-custard desserts are all milk—fun to eat when children tire of drinking milk, and any other time. They're so easy to make, too, with "Junket" Brand Rennet Powder or Tablets—no eggs, no cooking. And the rennet enzyme makes milk even easier to digest. Why not give your baby a rennet-custard today?

Make rennet-custards with either "Junket" Rennet Powder—six flavors, already sweetened; or "Junket" Rennet Tablets—not sweetened or flavored—add sugar and flavor to taste. Both at all grocers. Receiving, at the hotel, Mrs. Saltzman, mother of the bride, wore a grey gown, with a corsage of pink roses; and Mrs. Weinstein, mother of the groom, wore teal-blue, with a similar corsage. For the wedding trip to Detroit, Mich., and Chicago, Ill., the bride wore a black suit, and accessories. The couple will live in Toronto.

The four-man American military court in Germany trying the leaders of I. G. Farben for instigating World War II held no session on Yom Kippur "out of respect for the religious convictions of certain groups who wish to observe the day as a holiday."

Rabbi Abraham L. Feinberg, leader of Holy Blossom Synagogue, in Toronto, will preach at Temple Emanu-el, in Montreal, on Friday, November 14, at 8 p.m., when Dr. M. F. McCutchen, minister, First Baptist Church, Montreal, and president, Baptist Federation of Canada, will be the other pulpit guest.

Woman Fights Off Mad Bull, Saves Injured Husband

WINS DOW AWARD

Mrs. HENRY CHESLOCK
OF TAVISTOCK, ONT.,
battles animal in courageous rescue

Henry Cheslock was about to lead the animal from a root cellar to its pen in the barn. He had just taken the bull by its nose ring when, for no apparent reason, it became enraged. A toss of its head knocked Cheslock to the ground. Before he had a chance to get up, the bull had butted the helpless man repeatedly. It then tossed him over its head, and rolled him against the cellar wall.

Henry Cheslock lay defenceless and injured on the ground. His wife, hearing his shouts, rushed to the rescue.

WIFE GOES TO RESCUE

Fortunately for Cheslock his wife heard his shouts for help. Without thought for her own safety, she ran screaming into the cellar to draw the bull's attention from her husband. As the bull turned on her, she seized a pitchfork.

Courageous Mrs. Cheslock pulled her husband to safety while keeping the bull at bay with a pitchfork.

FIGHTS BULL WITH PITCHFORK

While holding the dangerous animal at bay with the pitchfork, she began to drag her injured husband out of the cellar across the barnyard. The bull attacked all the way, but gallant Mrs. Cheslock managed to hold it off until she finally brought her husband to safety.

We are proud to pay tribute to the exceptional courage of Mrs. Henry Cheslock of Tavistock, Ontario, through the presentation of The Dow Award.

THE DOW AWARD is a citation for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $500 Canada Savings Bond. Winners are selected by the Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Canadian daily newspapers.

The Traditional Sabbath

By Rabbi Morris Max, Executive Vice-President, Rabbinical Council of America

People living in strenuous times require periods of complete relaxation if they are to function effectively. This was proven during the war when industrial plants, mobilized for the war effort, were forced to place their workers on a seven-day week schedule. The foremen soon noticed a deterioration of the workers' efficiency, and they immediately recognized the wisdom and necessity of preserving the physical and mental health of their workmen by giving them a day of rest.

The same principle applies to the spiritual life of people even in times of apparent peace. We Jews have been taught this fundamental fact which makes for happiness in life from the very dawn of our existence as a people. So fundamental was this to the very existence of civilization, that God Himself rested, so to speak, on the seventh day, after having created the universe in six days. Thus He Himself set the example for mankind.

Our Talmudic sages understood this well. When they read the sentence in Genesis "And God finished His work on the seventh day," they queried, "Does that not contradict the passage in Exodus (Chapter 20) which reads, "For in six days the Lord made the heaven and the earth, the sea and all that is therein?" Was not His work completed at the end of the sixth day and not on the seventh?" With their keen insight they found an answer for they said "After the world was created there was something lacking—that was, rest. When God brought rest upon the earth then and only then was the creation completed." Therefore, God actually completed the creation on the seventh day, although He did no work on that day.

The way the Sabbath is observed by Jews is indicative of the spiritual aspect of the day of rest which creates a better and more pleasant relaxation even in the physical sense. In the observant home the Sabbath is already felt on Thursday night or Friday morning. It is Erev Shabbos, when the mother or the housewife begins to prepare the special dishes which, as the Talmud expresses it, contain the Sabbath spices.

On Friday afternoon, the mother sets the Sabbath table with the glistening white tablecloth. On it are placed two Challahs (twisted loaves of white bread) reminiscent of the Lechem Mishneh — the double portion of Manna which God brought to our ancestors in the wilderness where they wandered for forty years on their way from Egypt to the Promised Land, Eretz Israel. These two Challahs remind everyone that God who watched over our ancestors will watch over the present Jewish generation, and will provide the Sabbath observer with the means of a livelihood. He need not worry that by closing his store or staying away from the factory on Saturday he will not have enough to provide for his family's needs. The mother by placing the two Challahs on the table reassures him and everyone in the home that God is good and provides enough during the week for the Holy Sabbath.

The Challahs are covered with a white cloth as an additional reminder of the Manna which in the words of the Torah was covered with a layer of dew, "fine as the hoar-frost on the ground." Next to the Challahs are placed the knife —in some homes a special knife with the word Shabbos inscribed on the handle is used — and a container of salt. According to tradition the Jewish table today takes the place of the altar in the Temple of old. The meal, especially on the Shabbos, becomes as sacred as the sacrifices of old about which the Torah decreed "With all thine offerings thou shalt offer salt."

In the center of the table are placed two candlesticks with candles that are kindled about eighteen minutes before sunset. The Jewish mother does not wait until the last minute of the day. In joyous expectation she brings in the Shabbos spirit with the kindling of the candles at least a quarter of an hour before the sun sets. The Talmud states that two candles are required as a reminder of the fourth of the Ten Commandments which begins in the book of Exodus with the word "Zachor" — "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy" — while in Deuteronomy the same commandment begins with the word "Shamor" "Observe the Sabbath Day to keep it holy." In other words to remember the Sabbath Day in theory is not enough. One must actually observe the Sabbath as a sacred day.

The father of the family and the children, in the meantime, do their share by attending the synagogue. Upon return from the synagogue the entire family joins in the joyous singing of Shalom Aleichem (Peace be unto Ye), through which, as the Talmudic sages viewed it, a greeting is extended to the angels of the Sabbath Queen, who transform the humblest home into a stately palace.

In the Sabbath atmosphere created by the mother, the father pays tribute to the "woman of valor . . . who is more precious than diamonds" because she brings spiritually into the home. He then recites the Kiddush — the sanctification prayer — over the golden cup of wine and thus officially announces to his family the arrival of God's day, a day that reminds one not only of God the creator, who rested, but also of the going out of our people from Egyptian slavery. It is the Sabbath that effectively prevents the Jew from succumbing to slavery again. Little wonder that the traditional Sabbath melodies and some known as Zmiroth sung between the courses of the meal have such a hold upon the observant Jew and Jewess. Every member of the family is eager to express his joy at sharing in the sacredness of the day.

When the meal is over and grace is recited the Chumash is opened and the Sedrah, the weekly portion of the Torah, is chanted twice, interspersed with the reading of the Targum, the Aramaic translation, to show that the Torah must not only be read but also understood. It is significant that the Hebrew is chanted twice, to show that the original Hebrew of the Torah is more important than the translation.

A Record Of Devotion To The Hebrew Free Loan

By A. Nirenberg, Of Montreal

The thirty-sixth year of the beneficent work carried on by the Hebrew Free Loan Association (Gmiluth Chasodim) of Montreal revealed the fact that over $175,000 was loaned out to worthy and needy borrowers. During these 36 years of its existence, it assisted over 35,000 borrowers with a total sum of over four million dollars, without interest or any other charges whatever. The thirty-sixth year symbolizes, in Hebrew, the arithmetical figure of "Lamed Vov", which in our tradition is tantamount to supreme achievement, unobtrusively and unassumingly attained.

N. S. Fineberg, K.C., of Montreal, President of the Hebrew Free Loan Association (Gemiluth Chasodim), will be honored upon the completion of thirty years in office, by a testimonial dinner at the Mount Royal Hotel Ball Room, on Sunday, November 30, at 6:30 p.m.

It can thus readily be understood that such zeal and efforts on the part of the administration of this institution would be crowned with a capital which now stands at the sum of a quarter million dollars ($250,000). This sum is, indeed, needed now, and for the future, to meet especially applications from prospective immigrants entering our country in search of a new lease on life, in addition to meeting the large and heavy demands now being made by War Veterans in their efforts at rehabilitation.

Such an unparalleled record could never have been attained were it not for the untiring and ceaseless efforts on the part of N. S. Fineberg, K.C., the president, who is now completing his thirty years in the active direction of the destiny of this institution, which has gained the affection and admiration of our entire community.

Indeed, a full measure of truth is contained in our well-known proverb, "In everything, one must have mazel". This is not only applicable to individuals but also to institutions. In this sense, the Hebrew Free Loan Association (Gmiluth Chasodim) of Montreal did have such mazel, in having had, at the helm, a leader of the personality of N. S. Fineberg, K.C.

Rarely is it given to a cause, movement or organization, that a man of the calibre of this person, should be so universally acclaimed for his outstanding qualities of leadership and sense of public communal responsibility. In view of his Canadian birth and his excellent command of both English and French, his Western academic and cultural training, his Colleagues on the Board appreciate and admire, all the more, Mr. Fineberg's deep sensitiveness and sympathetic understanding of the various currents appertaining to Jewish life, especially those centering around the idealism of the concept of the Gemiluth Chesed.

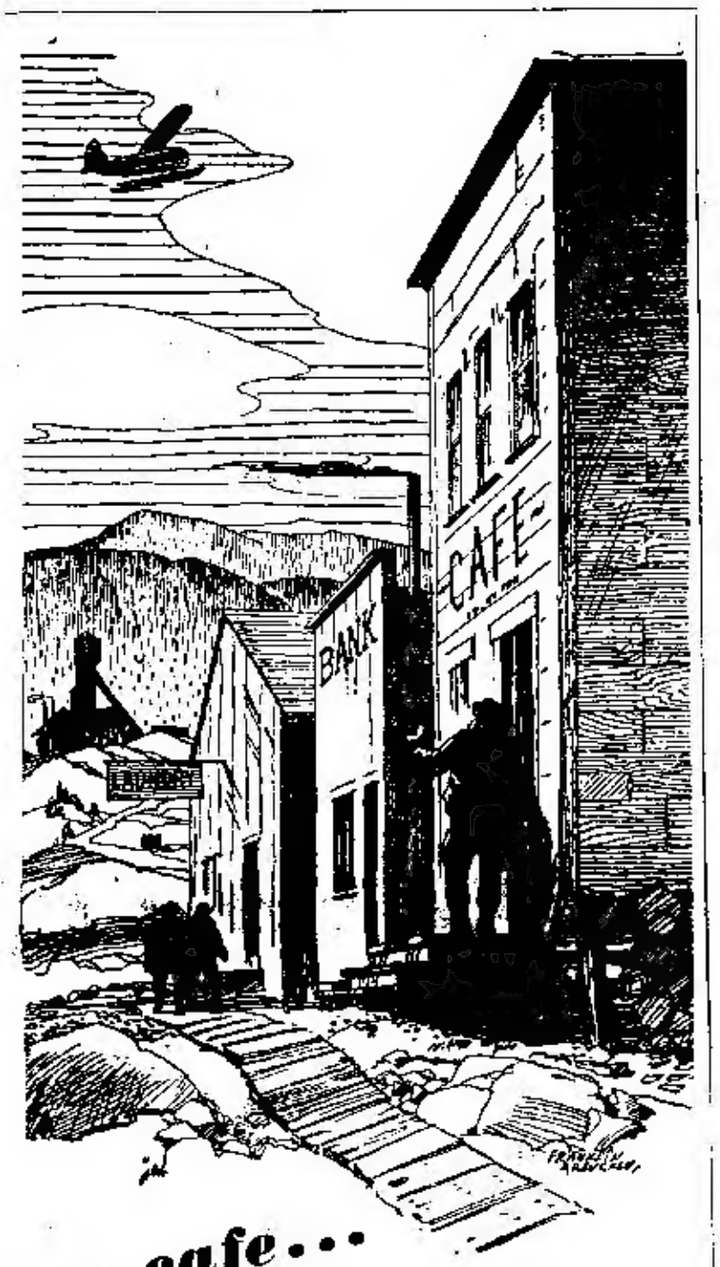
On several occasions Mr. Fineberg was approached by Government leaders of the Liberal Party to stand for the Quebec Legislature and the Federal Parliament. It could safely be assumed that he would have carried the election, which would have been a signal honor not only to the Jewish community of Montreal, but to Canadian Jewry at large. But he always declined, as his heart and soul were intertwined with Gmiluth Chasodim, for to him this was the highest form of service.

During all these years, he earned the profound respect and confidence of his Colleagues on the Board. To them, he was an inspiration and they were ever willing to follow his guidance and leadership. No wonder then, that the utmost harmony prevailed in the Councils of the Board, and seldom, in our community, has such a fortunate combination been found among organizations.

For thirty years did N. S. Fineberg preside over and direct this institution, without thought of reward or benefit. Who else could there have been in our community to have so devoted himself, gratuitously? Can we perceive the cost of an engaged executive director during these thirty years? What an impact such costs during thirty years would have made on the capital of this institution! We must pause to ponder and ask ourselves what recognition did our community ever bestow or manifest for such an unparalleled record, during thirty years of such selfless and indefatigable service?

The moment has now come when such recognition is overdue. The Officers and Directors of the Hebrew Free Loan Association (Gmiluth Chasodim) of Montreal have taken upon themselves, the pleasurable duty, as representing the Jewish community in all walks of life, and the honor and privilege of tendering to Mr. Fineberg, a public testimonial dinner on Sunday night, November 30, in the Mount Royal Hotel, in order to extend to him, in a small measure, public tribute for such an unprecedent life of devotion to the interests of our community. On this festive occasion, no appeal for funds whatever will be made. The Members of the Board of Directors have personally undertaken to bear the extra cost necessary to make this manifestation a public tribute to Mr. Fineberg, in keeping with the dignity of the noble constructive work of this institution and the sacrifices made by him.

Mr. Fineberg has richly earned such a public demonstration. It is hoped that the members of our community will find pleasure, coupled with a sense of duty, to participate by attending this testimonial dinner, which is the only reward that our community can be stow on one who has given ungrudgingly so much of himself for its own benefit.



a cafe... a laundry... a Bank

THE VEIN proves rich, a shaft is sunk, and a new mining town springs into life. The main street takes form. Commercial buildings rise.

When such a development occurs, the services of a bank are needed — to handle payrolls, to keep savings accounts and, as the town grows, to furnish bank credit for the needs of the community.

This is a basic pattern in Canada's development. And part of it is the local bank manager, providing those financial services which help Canadian men and women to win the rewards of modern enterprise and modern living.

BANQUET COFFEE RECIPE

To make coffee for one hundred people, measure one hundred cups cold water (approximately twenty quarts), into a large pot. Place two pounds coarse-grind coffee into heavy cheesecloth or muslin bags, made large enough to allow coffee to expand freely. Place bags of coffee in the cold water about six or seven hours prior to time of serving. When ready to make the coffee, bring to boil, and let simmer for five or ten minutes. It is important not to boil coffee; and it will take at least one hour to bring it to the boiling point. Remove coffee bags, keeping coffee hot; and serve. This amount will require about two quarts of cream, mixed with some milk, if desired; and about two pounds of lump sugar.

Palestinian Couple To Study Theatre

Fordham University enrolled as students a young Palestinian Jew and his wife who hope to make American culture and its techniques play a more dynamic role in the culture of their homeland.

The students are Jacob and Niza Gabbai, 26 and 22 years old, respectively, who arrived from Palestine to study at the university's Graduate School, in the Department of Communication Arts.

Mrs. Gabbai, a reserved young blonde wearing a rough wool blue dress, sat back and nodded affirmation, for the most part, while her husband explained they came to study theatres, radio and motion pictures. The Gabbais were married in their home town of Tel Aviv in 1944 while Mr. Gabbai was on furlough from duty with the British Army's Jewish Brigade.

Mr. Gabbai is co-editor of Mavak (Struggle), a publication of the Young Palestinian League in Tel Aviv, which seeks to integrate the country's cultural resources. "Ours is a new culture", he said. "It is different from Jewish culture abroad in that it is much more healthy and not as self-conscious."

Basically, he said, it is "a blending of the East and the West, with the emphasis on the West."

The couple enrolled at Fordham "because it is a complete university and not just a drama or radio school, and also because it is located in the world capital of the theatre," Mrs. Gabbai said. She added that she and her husband hoped to see "all the plays we can possibly get to".

HANDS AT WORK
...LEARNING REFRIGERATION
ONTARIO'S productive capacity is the measure of her future prosperity. To assure this province a prominent place in domestic and foreign trade markets, skilled hands are needed. Increased production of refrigeration units will mean a greater need for skilled servicing. Veterans, basically trained in schools and ON THE JOB, will fill this need as they are absorbed into industry. For those who have mastered skilled occupations, higher wages, job security and better working conditions are within easier reach.
Through plans sponsored by the Department of Veterans' Affairs and other agencies, hundreds of young workers are being trained for refrigeration servicing. Graduates of training schools are ready now to take their places in industry. Craftsmen of the future, they will have a share in Ontario's progress—an important part to play in her industrial development.

The Road To Lasting Peace

"And they shall beat their swords into plowshares,
And their spears into pruning-hooks;
Nation shall not lift up sword against nation,
Neither shall they learn war any more." Isaiah, Chapt. 2:4

On Remembrance Day we pause to pay tribute to the gallantry and sacrifices of those who made possible the maintenance of human freedom in the world. We especially recall those who made the supreme sacrifice. These youths fought a war they never wanted. They came from many homes, rich and poor. We remember them whose faces we shall never see again. We remember them in gratitude before God.

How strange that at this time of memorial, thoughts of a World War III should so dominate our lives! Shall we say that those who fell and made the supreme sacrifice have failed? It must not be. Shall the heroism of those we remember with ceremony and mourning once more be accounted wasted? The living comrades of those who died naturally experience disappointment, seeing how little of a lesson mankind has learned and how quickly mankind is apt to forget the meaning of the World War II struggle.

Have we not the wisdom to build the decent society by removing strife and selfishness and greed from our midst? How long will mankind continue to be spiritually immature and indulge in fighting it out?

It is the duty of every thinking individual and especially those identified with religion to become soldiers of peace and battle to end war by improving the moral climate of our world. How challenging are the tasks which face us in this regard. This indeed is the meaning of the poet when he cried:

"Take up our quarrel with the foe!
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch — be yours to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow in Flanders Fields."

Here the poet was speaking for the departed comrades when he pictured them as prodding on the living to fulfill the ideal for which they died. These honored dead speak through us that we implement the ideals of universal peace in actuality.

We do rejoice that the United Nations Organization holds great promise in perpetuating world peace but we must not leave it all to those who are assembled at Lake Success. We must galvanize public opinion in order to strengthen the hands of the leaders who are now engaged in the struggle to firmly establish the family of nations and universal brotherhood.

Of course, we must realize that at this critical post-war hour two ideologies are at war. The concept of freedom as represented by the United States and the concept of security as represented by the Soviet Union are in combat. Both of these are essential in the establishment of the happy world. What good is freedom of the press and freedom of speech, freedom of religion, if men are permitted to go hungry and stand in breadlines and are doomed to worry about jobs! What good, on the other hand, is security which provides for man bread but makes out of him a slave and a mere cog in the wheel of the State?

The world now split into two warring camps must become one world. Capitalist America and Communist Russia must unite and make possible the one world. Both freedom and security are conditions essential to happy human living. Both of these are rooted in the doctrine of religion that all men are children of One God. We need only recall the lesson of Germany. For almost a decade Hitler tried to win the German masses but failed. Then came 1933. Multitudes of Germans were jobless and hungry. Hitler offered them security and they exchanged their freedom for security. But then when Hitler had the masses of Germans with him, he in turn enslaved them and drove them into war. And thus we behold the tragedy of a Germany of the present hour.

Encouraging it is that the powerful United States has resolved, through the Marshall plan, to aid the peoples of the world who are hungry. We see in this plan a partial solution in aid of a troubled world. We see in this plan also a great hope for the re-establishment of normal living among the millions today who are in desperate circumstances. Perhaps, through this plan, the threats so often made by Stalin will be dissipated and multitudes will seek the golden mean in economic living and striving rather than to turn to extreme leftism.

But all of us must take courage and seek to forsake excessive economic individualism and seek so to order society that every individual will be guaranteed a minimum wage and not be subject to exploitation as is so often the case in our capitalistic economic society of the day.

The Jew in particular has great interests in peace. Amidst the vine-clad hills of Palestine the Jewish prophet Isaiah 2700 years ago visioned a world where war will be no more. We Jews salute one another with the memorable greeting of Shalom. Shalom is a most precious word in our Hebrew vocabulary and in our daily prayers. For no people suffer so much as the Jew when men indulge in combat. As a people we have been the greatest of sufferers amidst all the wars of history. As a people we have always hungered for peace and brotherhood. Israel's mission is that of peace.

With all faithful servants of God and with all who are committed to the belief in a Universal Father we must now pray more than ever that this outmoded and outworn institution of war be eradicated from society and that we be given the wisdom and the understanding to live in brotherhood with one another. The road to lasting peace is filled with many obstacles but we of this generation must resolve all the more to sacrifice, to toil, and to labor for God's Kingdom on earth.

"Sometimes when people censure me.
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

The death of John Gilbert Winant, former American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, by his own hand, removed from this world a Christian whose whole philosophy of life was Jewish to the core because it was based on a sense of human solidarity. Far above the superficial demarcations that set men apart from each other, he saw the greater comradeship of man which is indispensable to the unfoldment of the better world he yearned to help in building. For that reason Winant was the great American public figure of his hour, not because he was great as a Governor of New Hampshire nor because of his political works and accomplishments for his country at home and abroad, but because of the inner essence of his spirit which made the lintels of the doors grow large at his approach as the Greeks used to see them expand for the entrance of their gods when they came down to earth to visit.

About a week before his death Winant gave the keynote address at the New York Herald Tribune Forum on "Modern Man, Slave Or Sovereign?" In it he made a reference to the lines by John Donne, the English poet, who wrote nearly three hundred years ago: "Each man's death diminishes me for I am part of mankind. Therefore send not to ask for whom the bell tolls, it tolls for thee." Now that Winant's death has diminished any man in the world regardless of his color, creed, or condition, the short and simple address he gave before the Forum remains as something of a last testament of beliefs, the content of which is entirely Jewish in origin, beginning with the emphasis on the worth and importance of the individual.

Winant worked for social justice, this aim, which is part of the warp and woof of ancient Jewish teaching, having been his lifelong creed. He had been born an aristocrat in the midst of wealth but for most of his life his main concern was for the poor, the weak, and the dispossessed. The week before his death he said: "A new danger in the aftermath of the present war, to private enterprise here and to peace abroad, is unprecedented profits in combination with high costs of the necessities of life. It creates dissension at home and runs counter to our foreign policy. The worker who cannot buy sufficient food for his children at home queries our economic system, and, because of his difficulties, questions our program to export foodstuffs abroad, and yet that same man does not want to see his children grow up only to be killed in another war."

This warning of a deeply religious man, spoken in an age of widespread lack in human sympathy, against the dangers that are contained in the injustice of exploitation, in the immorality of pushing the worker to the wall, in the sinfulness of allowing want to exist by the side of wealth, is the warning of the Hebrew prophets that it is not the protection of property but the safeguarding of humanity which must come first. It was people and their every-day struggles that counted first with Winant who once said: "Jungle warfare has no place in modern industry, and the exploitation of workers has been a deep and underlying cause of our lack of social advance."

Winant's last public words showed a great anxiety over peace. He considered it the highest aspiration of the common people and one which could be founded only on social justice, a philosophy which was anticipated by the prophet Isaiah and echoed by others. The ancient teaching on war and peace was so sound then that it is good forever: Peoples who are secure, those who have food and adequate shelter, opportunity for development and recognition, and a full chance for a good and happy life have nothing to gain that is worth the risk and horrors of war. It is the frustrated, the under-privileged, the bitter and hate-filled hungry populations that make up the breeding grounds for war. The failure to establish social justice is a violation of the moral law and the underlying cause of war.

A revolution of the spirit could change that and Winant made a plea for it when he said: "I believe that if we don't treat peace as seriously as we did war we'll never enjoy it—permanent peace on earth. And I also believe that whatever is done in the international scene by this great country will depend upon what we, the people of this great country, want."

Winant was a reflective and compassionate Christian but not pessimistic. His optimism, on the other hand, was the kind that characterizes the Jewish people as a group, always holding on tightly to a vision of a better world motivated not by might but by the spirit of the Lord. "Always remember," said Winant, "that it is the things of the spirit that in the end prevail; that caring counts, and that where there is no vision the people perish; that faith and hope count, and that without charity there can be nothing good; and having dared to live dangerously we may have learned to live generously. Believing in the inherent goodness of man, we can stride forward into the unknown with growing confidence; believing in our own powers, we can accept the responsibility in the world of tomorrow."

Winant's world of tomorrow is the same one that the Jews have been dreaming about for centuries. In it the haughtiness of men shall be laid low, as Isaiah says. In it there will be respect for individual personality and all human claims. In it the plain person will look from his community on to his nation on to the human family. He will remember that in Jewish teaching war was once a reminder to man that he had forsaken God. In that world in which the concept of human equality will be the basis of a new world order, the lion and the lamb will lie down together. The recurrence in lost times of men like Winant, loving their neighbors as themselves, sustains hope that the world of tomorrow, universally creative and free, is on the way. f.f.c.

fitted through a successful Jewish Palestine and that it would mean much to the peace and prosperity of the Near East.

The plan that Russia and the U.S. have agreed upon will mean little, Mr. Wallace continued, unless it can be implemented by a Jordan Valley Authority to provide water for the Negev.

Arab cooperation should be obtained, he declared, by making water available to Arab Palestine and Trans-Jordan. The Arabs of Lebanon, Syria, Iraq and Trans-Jordan have benefitted "enormously", he said, by the rapid development of agriculture and industry in Jewish Palestine.

"Peace and prosperity for Palestine means peace and prosperity for the world," Mr. Wallace asserted.

IRGUN

"The American League for a Free Palestine, which was set up at the initiative of Peter Bergson and embraces many prominent personalities, both Jewish and Christian, has played an important part in enlightening public opinion in the United States in support of the struggle for the liberation of Eretz Israel.

"The establishment of a Provisional Hebrew Government of all of Eretz Israel depends on the circumstances. The idea, which we put forward two years ago, has gained increasingly wide support and recently was adopted even by Ben-Gurion even though he, of course, was thinking of a partition Government."

Irgun Zvai Leumi has consistently advocated a complete Jewish state in all of Palestine and would even like to include the Jordan Valley, part of Trans-Jordan.

Asked if Irgun Zvai Leumi would continue to fight against the British forces in view of Britain's declared intention to evacuate, Irgun Zvai Leumi replied:

"Britain continues to grip our country in a vise of occupation and oppression and continues to wage relentless war against our people. Force must be answered with force. Our struggle against the British, which takes many forms, will end only when the British leave our country and cease combating our people."

Irgun Zvai Leumi declined to discuss reported clashes in Europe between Irgunist and Haganah immigration units and said that it would soon have full reports on events in displaced persons' camps in Austria, but that for the time being it did not care to publish the incomplete material at hand.

Concerning the Haganah-Irgunist feud, Irgun Zvai Leumi said it never wanted and does not now want to clash with Haganah, but would retaliate against any attacks made on its members.

DEBATE

States had proposed its direction by a General Assembly commission.

Since the meeting was closed, detailed reaction from proponents of the other plans was not available, but it was learned that "the going was tough," says the New York Times. The previous objections of the Soviet Union and Britain were not fully met, it was reported.

TRADITIONAL SABBATH

While this is being chanted, the father obtains a report of his child's progress at the Yeshiva or at the Talmud Torah. The child becomes aware of the need of a thorough knowledge of the Torah. Only in that way can he join completely in the festive atmosphere of the Sabbath. Where it is impossible for the family to engage in study, as described above, the evening is utilized for organized communal spiritual activity. The family wends its way to the synagogue to listen to a lecture on some Jewish subject, to participate in an open forum at the Oneg Shabbat of the community and to join in communal singing of traditional and Palestinian melodies.

Thus the entire family is bound closely together by strong spiritual ties which can resist all the economic, educational and social forces of the non-Jewish environment. As a Sabbath eve comes to a close with the last flicker of the candle light and the Sabbath Menuchah (calm) descends upon the Jewish home, there comes eloquent evidence of the truth of the Talmudic sages that man and woman, father and mother, are capable of making the divine presence dwell among them.
